Scallop FAQ

Where are Atlantic sea scallops from?

Atlantic sea scallops are found in the Northwest Atlantic Ocean. More specifically, Newfoundland to Cape Hatteras, North Carolina.

Do scallops swim?

Scallops are great swimmers! They are free-swimming and use jet-like propulsion to swim. In fact, they swim at about 2-2.30 MPH.

Can scallops see?

Yes! Scallops have 200 eyes that run along the outer edges of their lower and upper shells.

Is there a national holiday for scallops?

For sure, National Fried Scallops Day is October 2nd. Spread the word!

What is the lifespan of a scallop?

Scallops are known to have lifespans of up to 20 years.

How many eggs does a female scallop produce each year?

A female scallop can produce hundreds of millions of eggs each year.

How big do scallops grow?

The largest scallop ever reported was about 9 inches in shell height. Usually, the size of a scallop's shell is no more than 6 inches.

How long have scallops been around?

Paleontologists have found scallop fossils that are over 200 million years old. So, yea, they have been around a while.
